Dear Dr. Garcia,

This is just a heartfelt, is somewhat belated, thank-you for addressing our April 29th luncheon honoring the winners of our Dallas public high school writing contest.

With your track record of doing so much for the Hispanic community, you could have made a short, dry speech. But instead, you chose to really address the concerns of your audience. You managed to touch all of us-- the high school students, their parents, the members of our local Network of Hispanic Communicators and representatives of the Hispanic community who do not belong to our group. You managed to entertain us with your self-effacing asides, while bringing us a serious message. For me, personally, it was to hang on to our culture-- especially our language and to take pride in it. I didn't need to be convinced of that, but I was very happy that you are also concerned with the possible erosion of our culture.

Again, thank you, Dr. Garcia for having touched the lives of those of us who attended the April 29th ceremony. We applaud you for your continuing work in the community and hope that you will be making changes for many years to come.

Yours truly (y con un fuerte abrazo),

Maggie
