Dear Hector:

I was distressed to receive your letter regarding the problems that have been encountered in securing equal employment for Mexican Americans. You are familiar with my position on this subject and if my policies have not been properly carried out, I would certainly want to ascertain the source of the problem.

With all of the difficult situations confronting me, both in this country and abroad, I would appreciate it if you could discuss this matter with one of my assistants. I am sure you know Jake Jacobsen from Austin, who has an understanding of problems such as yours and who would certainly listen to your problems with sympathy and understanding.

I would suggest that you get in touch with Jake to acquaint him of the difficulties, so that he can report to me and we can see what can be done.

Dear Dr. Garcia:

The President asked me to reply to your letter regarding Mr. Alvino C. Campos. As you may know, the persons to attend the program which you mention for Mr. Campos, have already been selected for this time. I have asked the Director of Internal Revenue to check on the possibilities of Mr. Campos being considered for the next class. As soon as I hear from him, I will be back in touch with you.

I am honored that the President saw fit to suggest that you and I visit about the problems you mentioned in your last letter to him. I surely look forward to seeing you and working with you in an effort to solve what should really not be a problem at all.

Kindest personal regards.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Garcia:

As I recall in the meeting we had here at the White House a couple of weeks ago, someone complained about the discontinuance of messages to Mexican Consuls in this country on Mexican National Holidays.

I have checked into this in the State Department and am having difficulty in determining what the policy used to be in this regard. Will you be kind enough to advise me about this problem so I can proceed?

Kindest personal regards.

Sincerely yours,

Jake Jacobsen
