Dear Dr. Hector:

Just a note to express my personal appreciation to you for the contribution which you have made in the first major step toward the revision of our state's constitution. All those who, like yourself, were formally considered for appointment to the Constitutional Revision Commission should take great satisfaction from the knowledge that they were judged fully capable and sufficiently talented to undertake this difficult task.

The decision which we made was not an easy one, but I believe the thirty-seven citizens who were selected will earn the admiration and respect of all Texans for the dedicated manner in which they will accomplish their duties.

It is my sincere hope that you will closely follow the efforts of the Commission and, once the Constitutional Convention has sent its final revision to the people for approval, join with me in actively working for its adoption.

Sincerely,

Bill
