The National Association of Hispanic Journalists (NAHJ) will be offering scholarships to needy students who have demonstrated an interest in a career in print or broadcast journalism. A total of $2,000 will be awarded this year. Students who will be enrolled in college for the fall, 1988, semester are welcome to apply. The application deadline is March 11, 1988.

NAHJ will also offer for the first time the Mark Zambrano Scholarship. Named in honor of an NAHJ member and Chicago Tribune reporter who died in March, 1987, this $1,000 award is open to college juniors, seniors or master degree candidates at accredited institutions who wish to pursue careers in print or broadcast journalism. NAHJ's Zambrano scholarship is made possible through the generous support of the Chicago Tribune Foundation. The application deadline is March 11, 1988.

To receive a scholarship application or any other information, contact Jocelyn Cordova, NAHJ Educational Programs Manager, at (202) 783-6228.

NAHJ is a non-profit educational organization dedicated to encouraging the study and practice of journalism and communications by Hispanics in the United States and its territories.
